

pCAMBIA 5105 and 5106 VECTORS – BiOS Agreement

This sticker is the Agreement for use of pCAMBIA 5105-6 and any derivatives - BY OPENING THIS PACKAGE OR USING THE ENCLOSED PLASMID YOU AGREE TO THESE TERMS (a more complete explanation can be found at www.bios.net):

In return for the use of these vector and any derivatives, you agree

- to allow and encourage employees and students to post on www.bioforge.net or any website with a comparable license:
 - any improvements made to the technologies, and
 - safety information relevant to use of the technology and potential regulatory approval of products embodying it, and
- not to assert any intellectual property rights to the improvements and information against any others that have agreed to these conditions.

Use of these vectors under any conditions not conforming to the conditions above is not permitted. You may refuse to accept these conditions by destroying the contents and informing CAMBIA, or by returning this material to CAMBIA unopened. If you work in a non-profit or academic institution, you may use this vector subject to the above conditions and the usage conditions below, and you may distribute this vector and any derivatives you make using the vector if you accompany it with a copy of this Materials Transfer Agreement. If your institution or employer requires it, please make copies of this Material Transfer Agreement and obtain the dated signature of an authorised person at the bottom of each copy. Return two copies to CAMBIA at the address above, and CAMBIA will send one back after an authorised person at CAMBIA has signed.

For use by any commercial entity, information may be obtained from CAMBIA, GPO Box 3200, Canberra, ACT 2601, Australia, Ph: +61 1300 972 922 Fax: +61 1300 143 191 E-mail: licenses@cambia.org

USAGE CONDITIONS

The vector(s) on the enclosed card contain(s) the Staphylococcus sp. gusA "GUSPlus™" gene of US Patents 6,391,547, 6,641,996 and 7,087,420, Australian Patent 760275, New Zealand Patent 1485 and patents pending in the US, Europe and elsewhere. These vector(s) may be used in the Transbacter™ process described in patent publications US2005/0289672, US2005/0289667, and WO 2006/004914.

Rights of third parties: Other components of the vector and their use may be subject to the intellectual property rights of other parties (for example, in some jurisdictions the hygromycin resistance gene and its use and/or the 35S promoter and its use may be subject to valid patents for which a license may be required). Users are responsible for ensuring that all relevant licenses or permissions are obtained from the assignees of record, or other parties that may have acquired the rights. CAMBIA accepts no liability for non-licensed use and does not warrant freedom to operate in any jurisdiction.

Improvements: You can obtain technical support and future improved vectors if you register your use of this vector by logging on to www.bioforge.net to gain access to portions of the TransBacter, GUSPlus, apomixis and transactivation BioForge projects accessible by others that have agreed to the same license terms, with archived availability of the latest improved protocols and vector maps, and opportunities to discuss technical issues, patents, and improvements and share results, ideas, observations, questions and data with others that have agreed to the BiOS terms.

Attribution: Users will describe this vector in their published and unpublished works as "pCAMBIA5105" or "pCAMBIA5106", and will describe any clones derived from it by explicitly stating that the clone was constructed in or using these vectors. However, no vector derived from such cloning should retain only a pCAMBIA designation, as such designations are reserved for vectors developed and distributed by CAMBIA and its affiliates. In published or unpublished works, reference may be made to Nature 433:629-633 and the above-named patent publications.

WARRANTY
